FOOD TRENDS

by Dr. Deirdre Moriarty
Musgrave MarketPlace Trends Expert

France says "Oui" to sustainability

France has come out on top of a recent index published by the Economist Intelligence Unit as the top country for food sustainability. France has put in place legislation that bans supermarkets from throwing away unsold food and has plans to further reduce its food waste. 34 countries were ranked in the survey with Japan, Germany, Spain and Sweden making up the rest of the top 5.

Powdered foods

Powdered foods is a trend that looks set to stay in 2018. Matcha, turmeric and kale are just some of these powdered foods that are being added to soups, smoothies, lattes and many more of your favourite products.

The Neapolitan art of pizza making

We all know that carbs are making a comeback in 2018 with lots of great artisanal breads and fresh pizza and pasta back on menus. So it was great to see the art of Neapolitan pizza making being granted special UNESCO "intangible heritage" status. The Italian people felt so strongly about their favourite carb that 2 million people in Italy signed a petition protecting the unique pizza making skill that is handed down through generations. We are glad to know that the traditional art of pizza making is in safe hands.
