FOOD

Trends

Last month I took a short trip to Amsterdam to attend a trade show and do a food safari. I love travelling and getting to check out new places to eat. A couple of things struck me about the food scene there. Firstly, for the most part, it's totally cashless, with most places only accepting card - this works for me as I never have cash! The second thing was how many great little independent food outlets are open there, really focusing on quality local ingredients but using modern cooking techniques and influences from all over the world to create some pretty tasty food. I had some really great coffee and, in a nod to the classics, a Dutch pancake (or two!). I also had some really good sushi and my first ever batch of vegan wings, made from cauliflower. In this month's update, we have some good news for busy NYC shoppers, veggie burgers that bleed and the latest Instagram trend of "Food Jenga".

Have a great month!

Concierge in the City

Busy New Yorkers can now avail of Walmarts new concierge service. It's a step change for the company, offering same day deliveries and giving its customers more flexibility and choice. I'm a fan of online shopping so will be watching how this trial goes.

Food Jenga

Does your Instagram feed need a shakeup? Why not try a game of food Jenga? Instagramers are stacking everything from donuts to traybakes and more to create these cool pics. I'm going to give it a go. #foodjenga

Are you sure this is a veggie burger???

Whether you're a meat eater, a vegan, a vegetarian or a flexitarian, everybody loves a good burger. A lot of research is being done currently on meat substitutes and lab-grown meat, but there are also some new veggie burgers on the block. The "impossible burger" made in the US is a vegan product that looks to emulate the texture, taste and visual look of a burger, even "bleeding" due to a protein extracted from soya. One to try with a side of vegan wings!

The Importance of Portion Control

by Gilliam McConnell

Why is Portion Control So Important?

Growing concerns about the effect of portion size on overall calorific intake and health is causing customers to reconsider what and how much they eat so as they can lead healthier lifestyles. These concerns are also prompting restaurants to re-evaluate how they serve their food and with a few thoughtful adjustments, restaurateurs can remain profitable while at the same time streamline portion sizes, reduce waste and waistlines!

Portion Distortion & Health Consequences:

Overeating is a common tendency today and although reasons for this are multifactorial, over 60% of our Northern Irish population are now overweight or obese. Continually eating large portion sizes have many negative health consequences from increasing the risk of weight gain to diabetes.

What are Portion Control Tools?

Portion control tools come in many shapes and sizes. Using some of these devices available in Musgrave Marketplace – colour-coded scoops & ladles, as well as a commercial kitchen scales – are critical elements to help correct portion sizes. Using portion control tools as standard practice in your industry will not only keep your food costs in line but you'll also ensure that your customers will receive consistency when they order their favourite meals.

No matter the kind or size of catering business you operate, chances are you'll benefit from implementing some portion control tools so next time you're re-stocking your kitchen supplies have a look at our range in Musgrave MarketPlace.

“Once a dish is costed and you know how much food you need to put on the plate then it makes it easy, it’s all about consistency. Ensuring standardised methods will secure the profit margin on each dish.”

Eco

DISPOSABLES

Over the last number of months, you have probably heard a lot about single-use plastics & packaging in the media and how certain disposable products are impacting the environment. This is creating an increase in demand for disposable tableware and food packaging products that are made from renewable, compostable raw materials. Now more and more outlets are looking to move all their disposable packaging lines to an Eco-Friendly solution and this is only set to continue. Consumers are also driving this trend as they are more aware of the products they use. There are even several festivals that are going down this route of Eco-Friendly Packaging. In some cases, only vendors using Eco-Friendly Packaging are permitted to supply the event.

Sugar cane

This residual material arises in large quantities from sugar extraction in the production of cane sugar. Tableware made from sugar cane is stylish, light and very stable. It is also water-resistant, and is suitable for use in the microwave.

PLA (Polylactic Acid is derived from renewable resources like corn starch or sugar cane)

It is produced from natural starch, which can be moulded into almost any shape, and can also be produced as a film. It is taste-neutral and heat-resistant up to approx. 40°C.

In Musgrave Marketplace we offer a full environmentally friendly solution to all your packaging needs whether you are a retailer that offers Food to Go or a vendor who supplies festivals & concerts.
