HEALTH

Trends

This month I decided to focus on improving my portion sizes at each meal. Portion control is a key step in becoming healthier and many people are unsure what portions they should be eating. I found using a portion control plate has helped me master portion sizes for each meal. A portion control plate indicates the correct amount of protein, carbohydrates and vegetables and fruit you should eat at each meal. If you are someone that doesn't know what portions you should be eating I would recommend trying this out.

This month I will be discussing the growth of veganism in the foodservice industry and how convenience food-to-go is set to grow

Have a great month!

Aisling

Veggie Focused Dishes

Vegan and eco-friendly diets are set to be a key focus for the foodservice industry in 2020 as many customers are turning away from traditional protein sources like meat. Veganism taps in to both health and sustainability which are two trends set to expand. More and more food operators are offering vegan options which still provide you with important nutrients such as iron, calcium and protein. Some research has shown that following a vegan lifestyle correctly can help lower blood pressure and cholesterol levels. Try some of our vegan offerings in your local MarketPlace such as vegan burgers, vegan Moroccan soup or vegan mozzarella.

Convenience is Set to Grow

The demand for healthy food-to-go is constantly growing due to consumers busy lifestyles. People are looking for products that are healthy by being low in sugar, salt and saturated fat and good for the environment by using sustainable packaging. Meal kits and ready meals are not a new trend, but food operators are now providing healthier options by reducing salt and sugar content and offering portion control to consumers on the go.

Digestive wellness

One trend that has had huge growth in the foodservice industry recently is people wanting to consume foods that contain added health benefits to improve digestive health. Consumers are taking different approaches to this by eating probiotics, fermented products, as well as fibre, dairy and lactose free products. One of the healthiest ways to improve your digestive system is to consume probiotics which are important for promoting a healthy digestive tract. Foodservice operators can stay ahead of this trend by including food options on their menus that contain these probiotics such as yogurt, kefir, kombucha, sauerkraut, tempeh, kimchi or sourdough bread.
